the f*xk am i doing • music • beautiful garbage glitsch • hauntings • breatharianism • trying this is about defeating Perfectionism. it is a disease that you do not have to subscribe to.

i have no idea what i'm doing here///

this is not an adequate manifesto. but it is. enough.

often i say something like “there’s nothing stopping you from doing <insert something cool here>.” that’s not exactly accurate. not nothing, but very little. and often that “very little” seems like it’s reeeeally in the way.

there is very little stopping you from making your own zine.

there is very little stopping you from making your own art, and selling it to yourself.

there is very little stopping you.

i was inspired to do this after reading a free piece of microliterature called “Make a Zine” by Erin Dorney; she is up to great things/// @erindorney

i don’t know if i’ll even make another issue of this, but this one was fun enough and it gives me a reason to use these photos of random sh*t i take all the time if you’re interested in making something for a zine but don’t want to make a whole one yourself, hmu and we can collab/// @benjawmino if you are reading this, you are my friend. thank you.

let me show you something.

~ Ben

Breatharianism is a trip

→→→ALBUMS THIS MO. ←←←

() => I don't know why I've been sleeping on Toro y Moi for so long. earlier stuff is more like psych indie, Outer Peace is more housy and electronic pop. dig it all really. good working music.

=> on repeat: Laws of the Universe, Freelance, Take This

() => this ost is so good. I wish (K)NoW_NAME had more work I could listen to. tasteful pop and metal influence (and even eurobeat??).

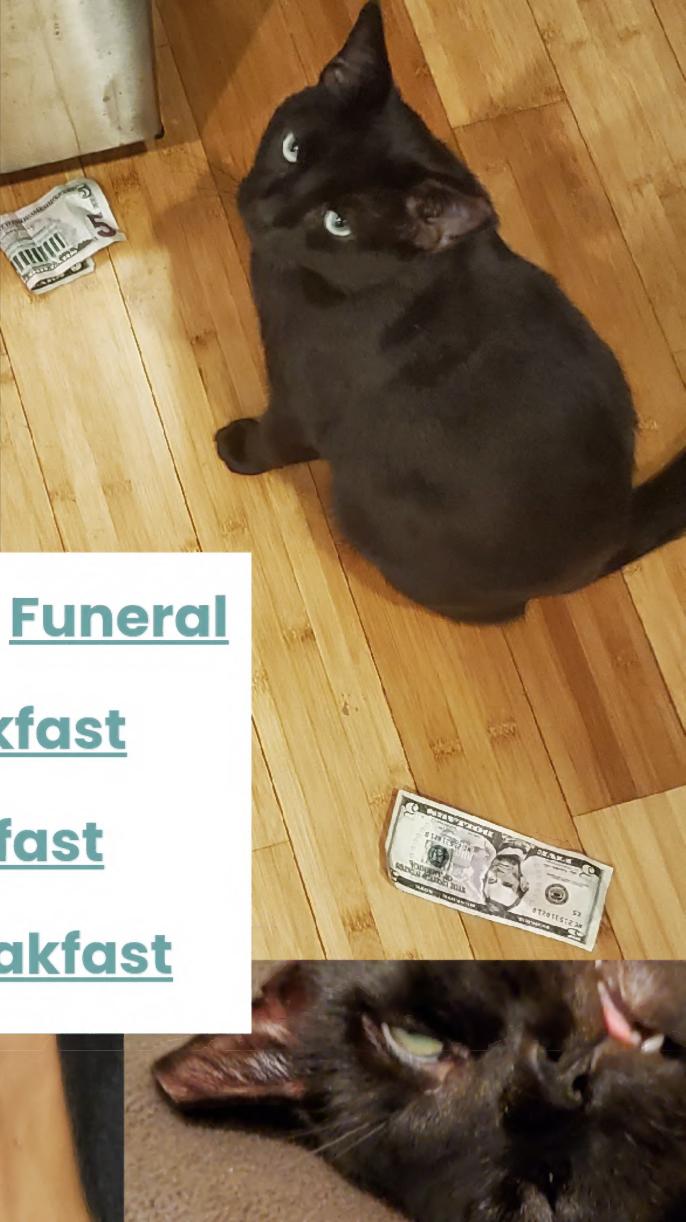

=> on repeat: Who am I?, BAD NICK

() => new Machinedrum, glory be. a good amount of variety across the album, lovely features and collabs, all with that distinct MD sound. and Tigran!! as with Travis' other work, I need to chew on this more and will be doing so for a while.

=> on repeat: The Relic, Sleepy Pietro, Spin Blocks
